

An evening with

Andrés

Gómez

A Cuban
standing up for
Cuba, in Miami

Behind Cuba's economic reforms • The struggle to free the Cuban Five political prisoners • The latest bombing by Miami's anti-Cuba terrorists

Andrés Gómez is a leader in Miami's progressive Cuban community, who has courageously stood up for Cuba's right to its self-determination, despite threats and the danger of advocating Cuba's right to exist in a city where anti-Cuba terrorists reign. He is coordinator of the Antonio Maceo Brigade, an organization of Cubans who live in the U.S. and support the Cuban Revolution. He is editor of the on-line magazine "Areitodigital." He is also a leader in the struggle to free the Cuban Five political prisoners, unjustly imprisoned in the United States.
